A CHURCH INNOVATION

REV. MR. SARGENT ADVOCATES THE CONFESSIONAL.

Many of His Parishioners Object and Have Withdrawn Support-Problem for Bishop-Elect White.

The date of the consecration of Bishopelect John Hazen White has been definitely set for May 1, but the place is not yet certain. It has been supposed that it would occur at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the largest in the diocese, which will seat 1,350 people, and arrangements are going on, to a certain extent, to that end. But the parish in Joliet where Bishop White used to preach desires very much to have the consecration occur there, and it is possible that the standing committee of the diocese will Bishop-elect White will meet a situation in the cathedral parish, Diocese of Indiana, which will call for immediate acton. There are a few of the members of this parish who have adopted the views of the rector, Rev. C. S. Sargent, who some six months ago preached a sermon advocating the Roman practice of the confessional. These are extremely high church in their views and follow other forms of the Roman Catholic Church. If a Protestant Christian should happen at one of the morning prayers which occur daily at 7 o'clock in the cathedral at the corner of Seventh and Central avenue, he would have to be informed that he had not wandered into one of the Roman Catholic churches of the city. The worshipers who attend are for the most part they who accept the practices laid down by Rector Sargent in his radical sermon indorsing the confessional. They bow the knee as they enter the pew, cross themselves in the Roman manner at the mention of the name of Jesus Christ ,and bow frequently in the course of the prayer. In conversation with the rector they address him as "Father," and they refer to him in the same manner. It is said that these practices are the same as can be observed in Rev. "Father" Larrabee's Episcopal Church in Chicago. Those in the parish who are opposed to such things explain that the practices are due to the influence of 'Father' Larrabee upon their young rector, he having been at one time under the Chicago rector's influence.

The confesional in the cathedral is a small room without partition or curtain, shut off however, from the prying eyes or ears of the world. It is frequented about once a week by those who believe in the confessional and it is said that more women than men seek the consolation of religious peace in this way. The penitents are required to sit with backs to the "father confessor" and there and then pour forth the story of the sin or misgiving of faith that troubles the disturbed spirit. What is told is, of course, one of the privileged secrets of the parties, and when the penitent leaves the sacred apartments, it is with the "father's" assurance of absolution from his sin. It is said that the visit to the confessional precedes the holy communion and is held to be a sort of preparation for it. At the communion "Father" Sargent wears the eucharistic vestments. Now, if the Roman views as to the transubstantiation of the bread and wine be accepted, there is nothing in conscience or practices that differentiate these worshipers from their breth-The confesional in the cathedral is a small ing in conscience or practices that differentiate these worshipers from their brethren of the Roman Catholic Church, except allegiance to the Roman Pontiff at the Vatican. It is understood that though these Episcopalians dislike the name of Protestant, and call themselves Catholic, they draw the line at the idea of allegiance to the Vatican. In all the practice of this body of Christians, the parish known as the "Episcopal Church of the Ascension," at Chicago, seems to be their pattern and exemplar.

The sermon, which was the cause of this state of affairs, was preached before Bishop Knickerbacker died. It is known that he disapproved of the idea and there has been some speculation as to why he perdisapproved of the idea and there has been some speculation as to why he permitted the views announced by Rector Sargent, whom he appointed and of whom he had entire control, to be carried into practice. It is preed, however, by some of the parish that the Bishop saw that only a few persons seemed to approve of it and that in the press of the more urgent affairs of the diocese he lost sight of the threatened split in the parish. There is a rumor going around among those who oppose the practices that the Bishop was about to act when he was stricken with his fatal illness. He must have seen by that time, it is said, that the division in the parish was widening, and that many of the most generous supporters of the cathedral were leaving it for other parishes where their Protestantism might not be offended. It is not believed that it was known to him that when some of the objecting members remonstrated with "Father" Sargent the latter told them if they did not like it they could leave. A large number who do not approve of the practices have remained with the parish, especially since the certainty of a new bishop seemed to point to a change, and the rector's views do not seem likely to spread.

It must be said for Mr. Sargent that he the rector's views do not seem likely to spread.

It must be said for Mr. Sargent that he did not and does not force his views on those unfriendly to them, and that he claims ancient authority in the teachings of his church for them. No one doubts his honesty, zeal or purity of character. The number of those who accept his teachings as to these forms is said to be not over half a dozen families, but so many have been cooled in their support of the cathedral parish that since the disturbing sermon not a cent of the indebtedness of the parish has been paid; and it is whispered that Bishop Knickerbacker hoped by having Mr. Sargent as rector without salary, the money thus saved could be used teward paying the debt on the parish property. The young "father" is a wealthy man by inheritance and is devoted to his church. He serves without pay. He comes of a Methodist family in Cincinnati, well known there and of high social standing. He formerly had a parish on Walnut Hills and later preached at Vincennes. Rev. Mr. Swan, principal of St. Mary's Academy, and "Father" Sargent's prede-cessor as rector under the Bishop, was asked, after these facts had been secured from various sources, if many of the Episcopalians of the city and State approve of these innovations. He said that on the contrary the great body of the diocese and the church distinctly disavow approval. "I regard the confessional," said Mr. Swan, "as one of the most dangerous forms in the religious world in its moral results. It has been proved so in the Catholic Church, and history, if our church should gen-religious world in its moral results. It has been proved so in the Catholic Church, and history, if our church should generally adopt it, would repeat itself. But as a form I have another objection to it. I believe it violates our faith in a far deeper way than mere Protestantism. It takes us back to the days of the old Jewish mediatorial priesthood, whereas our Christian doctrine not only permits but requires us to go direct to God himself for forgiveness for our sins. Private confession was not approved by St. Augustine and St. Chrysostom. 'What have I to do with men?' said St. Augustine, 'that they should hear my confession?' I do not compei you,' said St. Chrysostom,' to discover your sins in the presence of men. Unfold your consciences to God, show him your wounds and from Him seek healing.'

"The latter day practice of making confession to priests," said Mr. Swan, continuing, "probably grows out of the discipline in the early church of those baptized Christians who had committed some grievous sin. The reformed churches, except the Lutherans, have abolished private confession. These retain it in a general way, but do not require mention of each particular sin. The English Church at the reformation abolished private confession and in place thereof put a form of public confession and absolution at the beginning of each service of public worship. Bishop Wilson says: 'Our church ascribeth not the power service of public worship. Bishop Wilson says: 'Our church ascribeth not the power of remission of sin to any but to God only.' He holds that faith and repentance are the necessary conditions of receiving this blessing, and he asserts that Christ's ministers in a straight commission which ordinary ave a special commission, which ordinary lievers have not, authoritatively to de-ciare this absolution.

"But we have the written opinions of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the late Archbishop of York. The former said: "We believe that through the system of the confessional great evil has been wrought (in the Church of Rome) and that our reformers acted wisely in allowing it no place in our reformed church; and we take this opportunity of expressing our entire disapproval of such innovation, and our firm determination to do all in our power to discourage it."

CHILDREN AT THE FOOD EXHIBIT. Miss Craig Explains and Shows the Different Ways to Cook Meats. Yesterday was children's day at the Pure Food Exposition at Tomlinson Hall, and the little folks almost took possession of the displays of food products. They began to arrive early in the afternoon and ended up by returning in the evening with their parents. The attendance during the afternoon was hardly up to expectation, but last night it was all that could be wished. The children ran hither and thither, sampling everything which was in sight and calling for that which they did not see. In fact, they were guilty of visiting some places several times where the samples received were espcially suited to Miss Craig's lecture in the afternoon was on "Meats," and she prepared a number of delicacies, which were presented to the ladies present for tasting. She illustrated the proper manner of broiling beef steak so that the juices of the meat will not escape in the cooking. She also roasted a piece of beef, being browned "to a turn," as the ladies express it. The meats were served with specially prepared sauces, the steak being covered with brown mushroom sauce. A part of the lecture was as fol-

"Meat is the general term applied to the flesh of animals used for food. Meat includes beef, veal, mutton, lamb and pork. Poultry includes chicken, turkey, geese, ducks and all domestic fowls. In game we find the partridge, grouse, pigeon, quail and the small birds with venison and any wild meat which we get from the forest and the small birds with venison and any wild meat which we get from the forest or field. In meat we find fibrin, albumen, gelatine, fat and the juices of the flesh. The fibrine is in the blood. The true color of this is white, but the blood gives it the reddish tinge. Albumen is in the flesh and blood, dissolves in cold water, hardens in hot. Gelatine is in the tendons and gristless parts. The flesh of a young animal is hot. Gelatine is in the tendons and gristley parts. The flesh of a young animal is more tender, but not so nutritious. Meat is good at all seasons, but pork is better for fall and winter, veal for spring and summer, venison for the winter, lamb in the spring and summer and beef and mutton all the time. The beef is cut up in fore and hind quarters. The hind quarter consists of round, rump and loin. The fore quarter is divided into back half and rattle rand. From the back half we get out quarter is divided into back half and rat-tle rand. From the back half we get our fancy rib roasts. The sirioin is separated from the rump in a slanting direction. The second cut has the largest tenderloin, and from this part of the animal we get our porterhouse or sirioin steaks, as they are called in the different localities. This part of the meat used to be known as the part of the meat used to be known as the different localities. This part of the meat used to be known as the din' only until it was knighted by Charles II, of England, since which it has been known as 'sirioin.'"

At the close of the lecture Miss Craig read the poem describing the knighting of the loin. Her subject for Monday's lecture will be "Soup."

Heinz's Optical Illusion. The main attraction on the platform which is occupied by the display of Schnull & Co., is the great octagonal case containing the pickles, condiments and table delicacies of the H. J. Heinz Company, of Pittsburg. This is the same case which occupied a prominent position in the company's exhibit at

Ments from Kingan & Co. Directly in the center of the hall is a great circular booth which is filled with the meat products of Kingan & Co. The booth itself is artistically decorated in bright colors while the arrangement of the many dainties only adds to the beauty. The counter around the outer line of the booth, is loaded with raw and cooked meats, sausage, lard, etc., while around the ceiling of the pavilion, hang the num-erous smoked and dried products of the Uniformed attendants are in charge of the display and at all times of the day or evening they are pleased to serve free to all visitors, dainty sandwiches and fresh scups. The crowds seem to linger around this central display and many are the complimentary remarks concerning faultless arrangement and exquisite c liness. After night the pretty booth has an added attraction as the numerous incandescent electric lamps serve to set the various meats off to better advantage. Every one is thoroughly acquainted with the Kingan brand of goods, but many remark that they were unaware of the mark that they were unaware of the variety of the products which the company handles. The main display of the exhibit is changed daily, so that at all times the meats are all fresh and new.

Polar Ice Company.

The pure crystal water of the Polar Ice Company still attracts a large crowd around the booth of the company. The pure, cool draught after a struggle through the crowd, is more refreshing than any of the other drinks served in the house. The water is all distilled and bottled. It is the same as that used in the manufacture of the company's ice. The ice is absolutely pure and thus its great popularity is accounted for.

Indiana Coffee Company. The double booth of the Indiana Coffee Company is not only a novelty, but an artistic success. One-half of it is utilized to display the various grades of coffees, while the other half is occupied by two winsome young ladies in ancient Puritan garb, who serve cups of the fragrant coffee to the visitors.

Pupils' Art Exhibit.

An exhibition of pupils' work will be given by the Art Association from April 9 to the 21, at 82 East New York street. Work has already been received from the art department of Earlham College, the Indiana School of Art, the Girls' Classical and St. Mary Schools, and from the classes under Mr. Steele, Mr. Stack, Miss Hendricks, Mrs. Terry and others. The interest is very great among the young people, It is a surprise to find so many art students in the city.

Incorporated Yesterday. Articles of incorporation were yesterday filed with the Secretary of State by the Indiana Home and Savings Association, Indianapolis, capital stock $500,000; the Tribune Company, Terre Haute, capital stock $10,000, incorporators George B. Lockwood, Edwin T. Gregg, W. A. Woodring, A. L. Bodurtha; Home laundry, Indianapolis, capital stock $5,000; Clark & Stewart Planing Mill Company and basket factory, Shelbyville, capital stock, $12,000. The Lawyers' Loan and Trust Company, of Indianapolis, filed notice of an increase of capital stock from $25,000 to $100,000.

Portrait of Sir Bedevere. A life-size portrait of Sir Bedevere hanging in the Grand Hotel lobby is attracting a great deal of attention. Sir Bedevere is a handsome dog, weighing 220 pounds and worth $7,000. He belongs to C. A. Pratt, of Little Rock, Ark. The artist is A. Mont-gomery, a noted animal painter. Manager Tom Taggart has ordered a copy of the noble animal's portrait painted for the hotel. It is strikingly lifelike and dog fanciers are flocking to the hotel to see it.

Increase in Quantity of Mail. The report of Postmaster Sahm for March shows an increase in the number of first-class pieces of mail handled of 265,960 over the same month of 1894. The increase for the two months in the number of special letters delivered was 177. the total number of pieces of mail delivered was 4,-307,470. PRELIMINARY STEPS IN CHARLES KOERNER'S $50,000 SUIT.

Mother and a Stepmother Are Fighting for the Possession of a Boy.

In the Circuit Court yesterday the preliminary steps were taken in the damage suit of Charles Koerner against the C. F. Adams Installment Company, of Erie, Pa. Koerner seeks to recover $50,000 damages for malicious prosecution. In 1892 the Adams company had a branch office in Indianapolis. The business here was in charge of Clarence Lathrope, who was succeeded by Charles Koerner, of Haughville. Lathrope lived in Chicago and after severing his connection with the concern re-turned there. Koerner had been in charge of the branch but a short time when he was agrested at the instance of his emwas arrested at the instance of his employers on the charge of embezzlement. He was tried in the Criminal Court and acquitted. John M. Bailey, his attorney, at once filed a suit for heavy damages against the company and began looking up evidence that would benefit his client. Last week the deposition of Clarence Lathrope, the former local manager, was taken in Chicago and the action in the Circuit Court yesterday was for the purpose of suppressing parts of the document. Attorney Bailey avers that Lathrope received but $100 a month while in the company's service and at the same time maintained his wife and daughter in Parls at an expense of $200 a month. Attorneys Hill & Lamb and Duncan & Smith will represent the defendants. The case will be called next week.

BOTH CLAIM THE BOY.

Mother and Stepmother Have a Peculiar Case in Court. Judge Harvey, of Room 2, Superior Court, spent yesterday morning trying to adjust the differences existing between Mrs. Clara B. Clark and Mrs. Epha Johnson, of West Indianapolis. A bright-faced boy of eight or nine years was the cause of the contention. Both women wanted the child and resorted to the law to gain possession of him. Mrs. Clark was formerly the wife of Mrs. Johnson's husband, who is now dead. When the couple separated, Mrs. Johnson, the first, was given possession of the child that is now being claimed by both women. Johnson, after his divorce, took another wife and his former wife remarried. In 1889 the mother turned the child over to the father, but at the death of the latter she father, but at the death of the latter she demanded possession of the child. Mrs. Johnson, the second, declined to give up the little fellow. Recently the matter got into court and yesterday came up in the form of an application for a writ of habeas corpus, filed by Mrs. Clark, the mother of the child. Mrs. Johnson, the stepmother, declares that the boy was given to her by Mrs. Clark whom, she says, waived all future right to possession. Judge Harvey has taken the case under advisement.

ANOTHER BRANCH KNOCKS. Cleveland Iron Hallers Want the Pro-

the worm's fair. It is in itself an optical illusion. To look at it one thinks it is filled with the bottles of goods which are plainly visible, when in fact there is only one layer of the goods, this being just inside the glass case. Behind this layer of bottles, are mirrors so arranged as to cast a reflection of the few bottles so that it appears as though the great case was packed full of them.

Cleveland Iron Hallers Want the Protection of Receiver Failey.

Judge McMaster yesterday heard argument on the demurrer of Receiver Failey against the petition of Isaac Cowan and 1,890 others, who desire to share in the general dividend of Iron Hall funds. the Ohio receiver, appointed in July, 1894. They represent the Cleveland branch. They have already received 20 per cent. on the aggregate of claims but aver that the money in the hands of the receiver is nearly exhausted. The petitioners want the Cleveland trust vacated and ask that the receiver be compelled to account to Receiver Failey. In consideration of being taken under the wing of the general receiver the Cleveland petitioners agree that so much of the dividends as have already been paid them on their certified claims by the Cleveland receiver, may be charged up and prorated against them in the final settlement. the Ohio receiver, appointed in July, 1894.

Sequel to a Divorce. Suit was yesterday filed in the Superior Court by the Hunt Soap and Chemical Company against Mary G. Hunt and Ellen Cunningham, to recover $4,000 which it is alleged the defendants had received and converted to their use. Mary G. Hunt is the former wife of one of the members of the Hunt company. Two years ago she was granted a divorce from her husband and afterwards sued the company for services as stenographer and private secretary. She recovered a judgment for $2.730, Ellen Cunningham, the co-defendant is Mrs. Hunt's mother. The money which the company seeks to recover, it is claimed, was expended by Mrs. Hunt while she was living with her husband and was employed in the office of the company. The suit was brought by attorney H. J. Everett. alleged the defendants had received and

He Was Hurt in an Elevator. Charles Cronnenberger, formerly employed as a packer at Kipp Bros., yesterday filed a ten-thousand-dollar damage suit against the firm. He alleges that he was hurt in an elevator accident in November, 1894. The lift, he says, was operated by means of a heavy weight. On the date of the accident a fellow-employe named Winter got caught under the weight, and while assisting him to escape the plaintiff was hurt. He says that the accident was not the result of negligence on his part Compromised for $2,500. Three months ago William B. Dickson, the twelve-year-old son of James C. Dickson, living on North East street, was hurt by a College-avenue electric car. Three fingers of his left hand were cut off as smooth as if they had been amputated by a skillfull surgeon. Attorney W. L. Taylor was employed by the boy's father to sue the street car company and yesterday compromised the case for $2,500.

Grand Jury Returns. The county grand jury has returned the following indictments against minor offenders: Emanuel Kennedy and Wiley Emfers, petit larceny; Walter Merritt and James Cain, grand larceny; Robert I. Private Detective Sues for Services. Robert D. Hobbs, a private detective, yesterday brought suit against Bennett Barnett for services, alleging that the defendant is indebted to him in the sum of $120.58. TOWN TICKETS AT MOUNT JACKSON. Both Parties Made Nominations Last Night-Republicans Confident.

The politicians of Mount Jackson met last night and put in the field the tickets for the town election which takes place the first Monday in May. The Republicans met early in the evening, and the result was as follows: Trustee-Third district, Leroy E. Snyder; clerk, Wm. P. Wright; treasurer, Ira Dell Farris; marshal, Jesse

There was much enthusiasm shown in the meeting and the Republicans of the suburb meeting and the Republicans of the suburb are confident of victory when the day for the final count comes. All of the candidates are young and representative men and will make a fight such as only the younger men are capable of doing. Jesse Folz, the candidate for marshal, is the only man on the ticket who has previously been before the public as a candidate for office. He is the present incumbent of the office of marshal and has filled the position with much ability for the past two years. William Wright, the candidate for the cierkship, is the time-keeper at the Brown-Ketcham Company's works. Mr. Farris, the candidate for treasurer, is at present employed in the shipping department of the Indianapolis foundry. Mr. Snyder, the candidate for trustee, is connected with the Malleable fron works, of Haughville. The Republican forces are well organized and under the leadership of Mr. Hugh McBroom, who was last night appointed town committeeman, will find little difficulty in defeating the following ticket which was put forth by the Democrats: Trustee—Third district, James Stewart; clerk, Laif Weathers; treasurer, Charles McGarvy. Mr. Folz, the Republican candidate for marshal, was indorsed by the Democrats.

MANY SMALL FIRES.

Department Kept on the Run All of Yesterday Afternoon.

Yesterday was a busy day for the fire epartment. Beginning at 12 o'clock the ifternoon and evening were put in making runs. At 12:40 a defective flue at No. 63 Columbia avenue caused considerable loss. The house was occupied and owned by Henry Holz. The flames communicated to No. 69, occupied by E. D. Perkins, where a loss of $5 was caused.

At 2:42 a run was made to the city dump, where a fire had been started, but was easily controlled. Little less than an hour later a shed belonging to the Big Four railroad at 121 South Clinton street was burned. The loss was about $75.

burned. The loss was about $75.

A few minutes before 3 o'clock some of the occupants of the Coffin Block, at Nos. 50 and 92 East Market street, discovered a fire in the janitor's closet and although they immediately turned in an alarm the flames gained great headway before the department arrived. The flames shot out of the secondstory window and to the passers by it looked as though there was a dangerous fire in the building. The colored elevator man was at the top story when the fire was discovered. He quickly descended and ran to the street and it was only after much persuasion that he was prevailed upon to return and bring out the thoroughly frightened occupants of the upper floors. The firemen carried a chemical line up the stairs and in a short time had the flames under control. The loss was about $125.

At 4:25 the oil house at the crossing of the I. & St. L. tracks and Harding street again called the department out. The fire was caused by some one carelessly throwing a match into some waste in the house. The loss was $10.

Last night, at 9:45, an alarm was sent in from the corner of Hillside avenue and Clark street, near where a barn belonging to John Spann was blazing. Owing to the long distance the department had to travel, the loss was almost complete. Two fine horses which were in the stable were burned. The loss was estimated at $700. The origin of the fire is unknown.

THROW PHYSIC TO THE DOGS. Clinic for the Treatment of Diseases by Electricity.

New York Evening Sun Cancer is being treated with some success by electricity. A case of lupus, which, if operated upon, would have necessitated the removal of nearly the entire lower lip of the patient, was cured in two treatments. The patient is a well known physician of this city, who, for professional reasons, objects to the use of his name.

"The current was used to inject certain jects to the use of his name.

"The current was used to inject certain chemicals into the growth by cataphoresis," he said. "Then by electrolysis they were decomposed, and acted with the result you have seen. The treatment has been wonderfully successful."

A clinic has been established at the Port Graduate Medical School at Second avenue and Twentieth street, where the poor are

Graduate Medical School at Second avenue and Twentieth street, where the poor are treated free of charge. This is the only clinic in the country for the treatment of diseases wholly by electricity. Medicines have been excluded, and the effort has been to see exactly what the current will and will not accomplish.

The room is divided into two parts by a curtain, and the physician in charge, three assistants and a nurse are kept busy three days in the week.

curtain, and the physician in charge, three assistants and a nurse are kept busy three days in the week.

Nervous diseases, paralysis, rheumatism and gout are successfully treated, and patients are becoming more and more numerous. They are enthusiastic about the results of the treatment.

Three kinds of current are used, according to the requirements of the case. These are known as static, galvanic and faradic currents. The static is given from a large "influence" machine; with six revolving glass plates. The machine is run by an electric motor, and will give a spark twelve inches long, if required.

This is too much like a flash of lightning for ordinary use, however, and a more moderate flash of three or four inches is commonly used. A stool with insulated legs of rubber stands beside the influence machine, and on this the patient sits while the doctor, with a brass rod in his hand, shoots sparks at him.

The treatment is very convenient, as it does not necessitate the removal of the clothing. Besides this its efficacy has been found so great as to justify its continuance. Several patients are now undergoing treatment for locomotor ataxia. The disease is considered incurable, but its progress may be arrested to a very great extent by the electric treatment.

One patient said yesterday that she used frequently to fall down in the street with-One patient said yesterday that she used frequently to fall down in the street without warning, but that since she had begun to take to the electric treatment she had felt so much better that she was able to walk fairly well.

The doctors say that electricity has given better results in this disease than any other form of treatment.

The doctors say that electricity has given better results in this disease than any other form of treatment.

Many of the patients are suffering from ailments much less serious. One man had a sprained wrist. Another, who had a stiff shoulder which disabled him for a long time, is now rapidly recovering under the stimulus of the electric sparks.

A treatment called the electric douche is given under certain conditions. It is exceedingly mild, and simply has the effect of throwing the body into a healthy glow. The patient sits in the insulated chair. Before him is placed a tall standard of brass, from the top of which projects a long, pointed brass rod. This is connected with the static machine by a brass chain. While the machine is in motion a trisk electric discharge takes place between the end of the pointed rod and the patient.

In darkness this is plainly visible. The effect upon the patient is that of being bombarded with millions of needles that just touch the skin, but do not really hurt. In a moment the patient's hair begins to bristle and little squirts of what looks like flame shoot from them.

The interruptions of the current cause shocks and variations in its strength, and have the effect of forcing it into and through the body in a succession of little puffs or surges. The interruptions are varied by means of a device for the purpose. At each interruption the patient's hair moves, keeping time with the surges of current.

A system of electrical gymnastics is given pose. At each interruption the patient's hair moves, keeping time with the surges of current.

A system of electrical gymnastics is given in cases of paralysis, and, indeed, in any case where it is desired to improve the strength of the muscles. It has recently been discovered that the usual electric treatment of such cases is all wrong, and that the continuous current that has been used herziofore produces a wasting of the tissues. The muscles require a period of physiological rest. This may be short, but is none the less essential.

A device is now used that automatically divides the current into periods of half seconds—that is, there is half a second of work and half a second of rest alternately.

This will, if properly used, develop the muscles, while without the intervals the continuous current would gradually weaken, or even destroy, them.

A gynaecological department is also maintained and has met with great success. Every modern improvement has been placed at the disposal of the physicians in charge, Much of it is of their own design, created to meet the requirements of special cases.

"The science of medical electricity is, perhaps, more misunderstood by the public at large than any other branch of therapeutics," said one of the physicians. "Electricity, if properly applied by a physician who knows what he is about, will often work wonders. If tampered with by a quack it is quite likely to result in incalculable injury to the patient.

"In fact, the blatant claims made by the latter class of persons have had the effect of casting into disrepute a most serviceable branch of practice. Electro-aherapeutical associations, composed of physicians of acknowledged standing, are doing much to counteract the evil work of the charlatans, and electricity in medicine is rapidly taking the place where it belongs. It will not work miracles, but it will undoubtedly do marvelous things if properly applied."

To Put Yourself to Sleep. Philadelphia Times.

A professional hypnotizer sent Miss Kate Field his cure for insomnia, which she gives to the public:

Procure some bright object upon which to gaze intently. This must be suspended a few inches from the eyes. I do not know what to suggest for the darkness which exists in a Pullman sleeper after the curtains are drawn, but imagine that your ingenuity would be equal to the occasion. Having selected this object—like a glass ball, a small looking glass or one of those large glass rings sometimes affected by comedians—you must so secure it in suspension as not to cause you any worry as to what becomes of it when you drop off in slumber. Philadelphia Times.

sode in army life. Commence with the opening of the day, when the soldier arises from his sleep. See his drowsy eyes, his content after a night of restful sleep. Follow his labor during the day and watch him growing more and more tired as night approaches and see him finally throw himself upon the ground, his eyes heavy, his body tired, his conscience clear, and wearled nature finally asserting her sway as he is lulled to sleep, sleep, sleep.

Again, imagine a caravan crossing a desert or plain. See the weary men, looking for sleep, seek their resting place for the night and gradually dropping off into sound sleep, sleep, sleep. sleep, sleep, sleep.

And now you are in sound sleep, sleep, sleep, and you will so continue until the porter, announcing your arrival at your destination, awakens you from sleep, sleep, sleep, sleep,

Dr. Paul Gibier, in North American Re-

Experience has demonstrated that efforts of the physician are seldom crowned with success, when, foreseeing misfortune, he tries to prevent or simply to postpone a marriage. He succeeds sometimes, however, but if he has not interfered in time, or if his advice has not been followed, he should not allow himself to be discouraged, but remember, on the contrary, that superior interests impose upon him the duty to prevent, as much as may be in his power, the consequences of a union the fruits er, the consequences of a union the fruits of which might be a useless charge to, or even a dangerous element of society. There again is a circumstance wherein the physi-
